To whom it may concern:

Our company provides two different telecom services:

- a) Operates mobile calling applications where users have to register using their own mobile number. The registration process requires the user to insert their own mobile number and receive PIN within an SMS. Therefore, we always have the user's MSISDN and no spoofing is possible. All calls made by the user of the app show their own mobile number as the Calling Party Number.
- b) Provide traffic termination to other apps' Publisher who use exactly the same registration process for their users.

On both businesses activities we do not allow CLI spoofing by using that registration process for the end customers of the applications.
